Yesterday, the nonpartisan Office of Congressional Ethics released new details regarding the allegations against Congressman Schweikert. The office found substantial reason to believe that Schweikert used the official resources of his office for campaign purpose or made his taxpayer-funded Congressional staff perform political activity, while he also may have received "improper gifts" and "authorized expenditures outside of the scope of permissible official expenses." This comes on the heels of a 424-page report released in July that found substantial evidence there have been multiple additional ethics violations within Schweikert's office, including improper "lavish" and "extravagant" spending of taxpayer dollars – even involving a trip to the Super Bowl. A full investigation by the House Ethics Committee remains ongoing.

"Congressman Schweikert is out of touch with our community and has become the worst of Washington politicians. He's continually put his own special interest backers before the people he was elected to represent - he's failed to be a responsible steward of our tax dollars, he's voted again and again to gut protections for those with existing conditions, and he's voted to protect his pharmaceutical company donors over lowering prescription drug prices for our families. It's time for fresh leadership - Arizonans deserve someone who will roll up her sleeves and fight to solve problems to improve their lives." said Dr. Hiral Tipirneni.
