As Extreme Weather Events Rage Across the Country, Sierra Club Endorses Dr. Hiral Tipirneni for Congress

The leading environmental group emphasized her data-driven approach to combat the climate crisis

PHOENIX, AZ - The Sierra Club, one of the nation's leading environmental advocacy organizations, endorsed Dr. Hiral Tipirneni to represent Arizona's 6th Congressional District. In the endorsement, the group cited her commitment to let factual evidence, not partisan bickering, guide environmental policy.

The endorsement comes on the heels of an unprecedented summer saturated with extreme weather events. Massive hurricanes tore through the Gulf, record-setting wildfires continue to burn up and down the West Coast, and Arizona residents are still sweating through the hottest summer on record. Extreme weather is just one of the many side effects of the climate crisis, and Tipirneni has committed to addressing its catastrophic effects head-on.

"Dr. Hiral Tipirneni will arrive in Washington with data-driven solutions to mitigate the devastating effects of the climate crisis. She will rely on scientific evidence and fact, not partisan posturing, to guide policy initiatives that will protect our planet," said Korey Hjelmeir, Political Committee Chair of the Grand Canyon Chapter of Sierra Club.

"Sierra Club has done amazing work to organize Americans across the country to fight for our environment, and I am honored to earn their endorsement. Protecting our environment should not be a partisan issue. In Congress, I will rely on experts, researchers, and scientists to implement evidence-based solutions to combat the effects of global warming," said Dr. Hiral Tipirneni.
